His counsel shall stand and he will do all his pleasure. Isa. XLVI, 10, Eph I, 11. The history of the Reformation forcibly teaches and proves God's particular providence, by which He is ever working for the good of HIS people, and counterworking the plots of the wicked, and we may well say that as many and various were the schemes and malevolent acts of men, so various were His providential interferences, disappointing the devices and snares of the crafty Romanists, confounding their plans and breaking, as it were, their machinery in pieces, that they could not perform their enterprises against Luther and his blessed work. The glorious Reformation abounds with proofs, by which we may be convinced of God's especial interference in behalf of his chosen servant, who, from the beginning of the Reformation until he breathed...
